Heroes 1992 Subscription Campaign

*****

Heroes of Olympus is edited by Steve Nicewarner; 1310-11 Ephesus Church Dr.; Chapel Hill, NC 27514; (919)-968-2504. Subscriptions to Heroes are available for the price of $1.00 an issue by writing the editor. Empires of the Middle Ages is a product of the old SPI. All other games are the trademark of the Avalon Hill Game Co.

*****

GAME OPENINGS:

PAX BRITANNICA: Tsuk signed up. Needs three more

UNITED: Nothing definite here, I'm just toying around with the idea if things lighten up around here. I'll probably offer teams first to people playing in less than two other zines.

EMPIRES OF THE MIDDLE AGES: Standbys are a/ways welcome here! Also, the Kingdom of Germany needs a player. It looks like a pretty strong country to me!

STANDBY POLICY: With the start of the Dip game, it looks like I'll need a standby list. The standby policy around here is that a standby receives two free issues (and my eternal gratitude) for taking a position. Note that this does not apply to Empires standbys.

Whatever you do, do not buy a copy of Civilization by Microprose if you ever expect to be productive again. I don't even have a IBM of my own, and I waste excessive amounts of time playing it. Do you remember the rash of late zines that came out when Railroad Tycoon was realeased? Well, expect it again, because the "slows" will definitely make the rounds again.

Another game I should plug is Adel Verpflichtet by Avalon Hill. For a "rock/paper/scissors" game (and that is a pretty good summary of the game mechanics), it is one of the most subtle and fascinating games I have ever seen. The game length (usually less than an hour) allows for multiple playings in a single sitting. Also, as an added advantage, it's one that the spouse will probably play and enjoy with you. I hope that AH continues to look for games like this as well as develop the 100th expansion for Advanced Squad Leader. Expanding the market of people who play AH games means that the potential market for the Dip hobby increases as well.

By the way, I am not going to comment on my lousy bowl predictions except for the following. I KNOW that the Liberty Bowl has to take a team from one of the service academies. That does not mean, however, that the best service academy team deserves to be in a bowl game. Then again, with the way things are going, every team will be in a bowl. I'm toying around with offering the "Heroes of Olympus Tarheel Bowl" offering $250 to pit the best college team not invited to another bowl against the top ranked high school team in the country. What do you think?

Oh, before I forget, congratulations to Duke on winning it's 20th game. Why did they have to do it against NC State though???

DEMOCRACY WALL

These are some of my random thoughts over the past few weeks. There is no real order to this, so bear with me.

I just finished looking at the election results from New Hampshire. Despite Buchanan losing enough percentage points to drop below 40%, I have to agree that he won a great victory. As for Bush, a 16% margin can hardly be considered a victory for an incumbent President. Now that Republicans have shown that Buchanan's message has some strenght, Bush says that he'll "take the gloves off." Hopefully this means there will be talk about issues and not mud-slinging calling Buchanan anti-Semitic, racist, etc. Somehow I doubt it.

On the Democratic side. Tsongas and Clinton have to be considered winners. Clinton survived all the mud found, and still came out with the same number of delegates as Tsongas. The Maryland primary will be the key for Tsongas. If he does well there, he might be able to keep up all the way to the convention.

On the other hand, Cuomo has to be considered the big loser in the primary. After all the hype about the write-in campaign, including Cuomo's "regrets" about not entering the race (now that Bush appears beatable), he could only pull in two or three percentage points. I don't even think he received a delegate. I kinda wish he did. It would be interesting to see whether he could recreate his 1984 speech in 1992.

One of the things that has bothered me has been the tactics that the Republican Party machinery has been using to keep Buchanan and Duke off the primary ballots. It seems somewhat suspicious that most Republican governors -- the guys who appoint the election comission -- are the head of their states' Bush re-election campaign. I'm not saying that anything fishy is going on, but it does look a little funny.

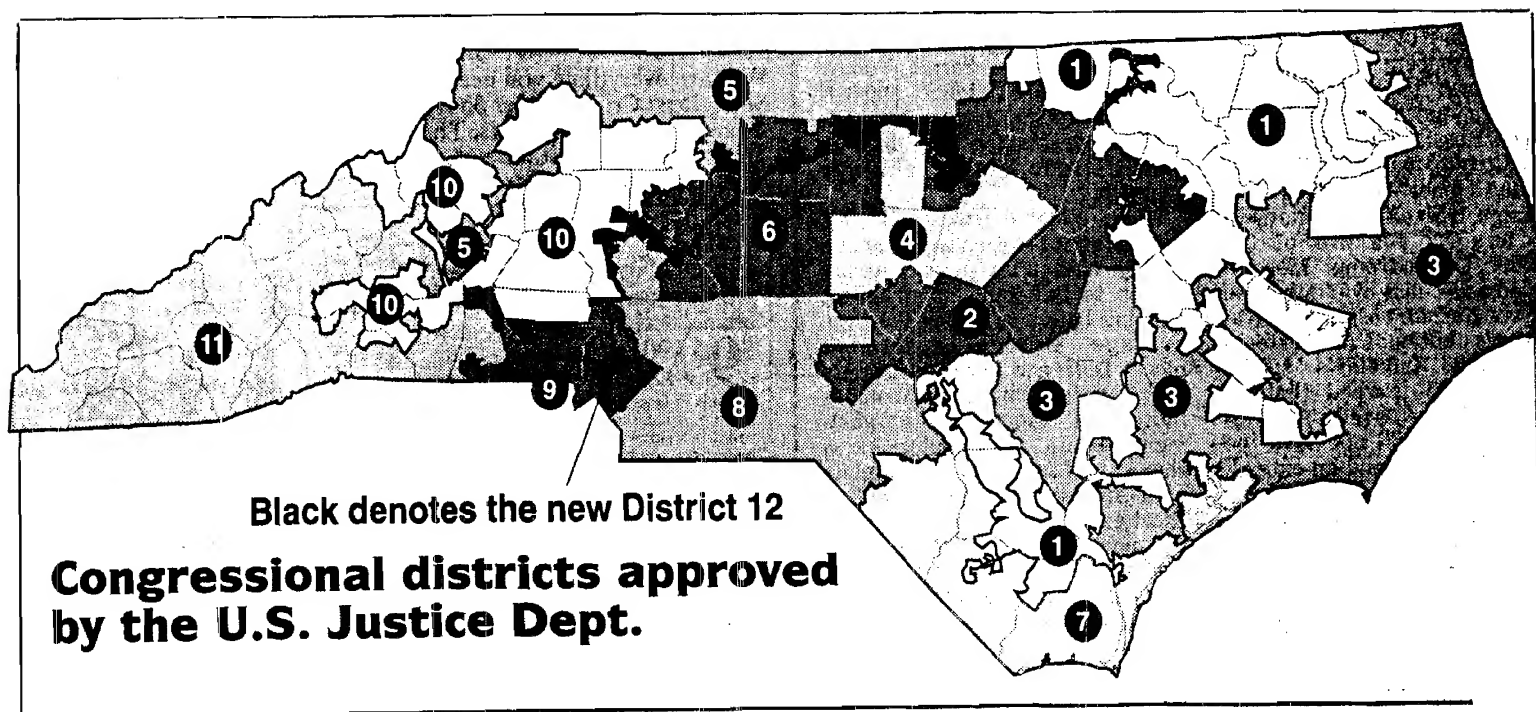

While I'm on the subject of national politics I should say something about national health care. First of all, I certainly do not think the government should be responsible for providing health care. If, however, we work under the assumption that the government should help the poor to get health care, there are some steps we can take. First of all, I would suggest that the medical deduction be moved from the Schedule A (Itemized Deductions) to the main 1040. This would give the poor some relief from the high cost of health care, since they usually can not use the current itemized deductions, without benefiting (or harming) the rich since they normally use the itemized deduction anyway.

The major thrust of the government's assault on the health-care problem should be to reduce the cost, not subsidize it. One indirect way to do this is to reduce the cost of malpractice suits. Suppose we changed the civil lawsuit system so that punitive damages (the large amounts used to "punish" the guilty) are paid to the government, not the victim. Since those amounts are "fines" the victims are not really deserving of them anyway. If the victim does not receive these amounts, then his lawyer will not be pressing for the exorbitant sums demanded today. Without the pressure of these huge settlements, malpractice insurance rates, one of the major expenses of the health-care system, should decrease. This would, hopefully, bring costs back down to the levels of the early 80s.

Japan bashing has been on my mind for awhile. I'm still trying to figure out why we are so hostile to the Japanese buying up America when the Brits own almost twice as much, and the Germans own half of our grocery stores. The only reason I can find is xenophobia.

This is possibly most evident in Seattle. Most of the nation is in an uproar over the attempts of a group containing a Japanese businessman to purchase the Mariners, which have been on the block for some time anyway. It is ironic that a nation so supportive of free trade would go into such an uproar over this. Besides, a baseball team isn't exactly a money tree anyway. I'm sure that lots of profit is going to go to Japan from here.

Finally, below is a copy of the new Congressional districts for North Carolina, brought to you compliments of the Voting Rights Act. Especially note districts 1, 3, and 12. It seems that gerrymandering is illegal in America, unless you are redressing supposed racial inequalities. What's next?

1992 Baseball Quiz

It's that time of year again. As usual, all questions refer to regular season stats unless specifically stated. Like last year, the prize is a $15 sub to a zine of your choice.

1991 Baseball Quiz

Here are the for the 1991 quiz. They are identified as Pete Gaughan (PG), John Ellman (JE), Jack McHugh (JMCH), Mickey Preston(MP), and Steve Nicewarner (SN). I don't have the answer to question #8 (Best record after 25 gms), but it really didn't matter. Congrats are in order for Pete Gaughan who got a lot of the three-pointers. Pete receives a $15 subscription to the zine of his choice. Revenge can be yours in this year's contest, which should be somewhere nearby.

From the Memoirs of Prince Richard Crown Prince of Burgundy

The years have been good to us in Burgundy. In the year of our Lord, 866, many of the good rulers of Christendom saw to the health of their realms. The new, enlightened King of Italy, Charles II took the fight to the pagan king Trpimir "the long-lived" at Zara. The fight was great, but the forces of God were victorious and the pagans were finally driven from their camps near Friuli. Also during this year, the Orthodox heretics continued to fight amongst themselves, meeting in battle near Iconium. The Byzantines were victorious and were seen preparing to lay siege to the rebel court in Smyrna.

867 was noted for me by the marriage of my father the Duke to Katherine, a French princess. The French have been shopping her around to various rulers for several years now and apparently the dowry was high enough to convince father to go along this time. She is an ugly wench, though. From guests at the ceremony, we heard about the Italian victory at Zara and how Serbia fell to the Croats almost the very same day.

The news in 868 was all about the attack on Byzantium by the pagan Croats. We sent a small donation to Constantinople to help in the defense. The Byzantines may be heretics, but they are certainly better than pagans. At least the Byzantines don't eat their children.

869 was a year of consolidation for Christendom. The King of Italy finally could turn to building his new palace at Verona now that the Croats are attacking the Empire. The respite will be short-lived, because Trpimir is not. Why Almighty God afflicts the faithful so, I will never understand. To make matters worse, Chales died when a block of stone fell on him as he was observing the construction. At least his son, Charles III looks worthy of the throne.

In 870 the Eastern heretics were again forced to defend their empire from the pagans. It is said that this exhausted their funds, so we must trust God for deliverance. In the west, a good harvest in France has raised the splendour of Paris to past Constantinople in her prime. Perhaps the marriage wasn't such a bad idea after all.

GENERAL COMMENTS

Something I've been meaning to talk about is the Statute of Limitations rule. As you have no doubt noticed, there will be mistakes in the adjudications. The policy around here is that errors not noticed within two deadlines after the error will not be corrected. Call it an act of God or whatever, but I refuse to go back 50 or 100 years to correct things.

Also, I should clarify something about area conversions. The mass conversion of pagan rules apply to ON, TUR, and all Slavs. The Balts and Magars have to be converted the hard way. Also, it isn't clearly stated in the rules, but diplomatic conquest can be used to convert an area.

Finally, I've come up with some general guidelines for NMRs. When a player NMRs and has no general orders on file, he will do endeavors in the following order; defend against all attacks, execute endeavors from last pentade if possible, rule court to max. This is how the French NMR was handled. Note that this is not what I will do with the Germans. I figure out their moves about a week before deadline.
